1994. For the Mazda 323, with only the base hatchback on sale for this model year, the car was discontinued after ending production in May 1994, resulting in the Protege alone becoming the entry-level for later model years. This generation's Protege sedan was a real sleeper, a very useful subcompact economy car that, when equipped with the optional 125-horsepower engine, was probably the fastest car in its class.
